Books by Myles Munroe Reign (1999) Reign is the first book in the Darkest Powers trilogy that is the main story for the Unbound Publishing imprint. It follows the life of a young girl named Anna from age nine to twelve, during the reign of the tyrant Frederick Douglass. It is written in three sections: "Seven Days a Week", "A Day in the Life" and "On the Dark Side of the Moon". The book is told through first-person narration from Anna and her friends and family, and incorporates many details from the life of Anna's mother, including a potential suicide attempt. Nightsong (2000) Nightsong is the second book in the Darkest Powers trilogy, and serves as the prequel to Reign. The main characters are Anna and her younger sister Leonie. In the book, Anna, at age twelve, goes missing. At her funeral, her sister declares a quest to find the villain. During the quest, a woman named Delphine saves her, and with her help, Anna finds her way back home. Ritual (2001) Ritual is the third book in the Darkest Powers trilogy, and serves as the sequel to Reign. In the book, Anna becomes a servant to Delphine during a time of unrest. Alongside her, she has a series of magical adventures and encounters, and is enlisted by Delphine to help her find a long-lost heir to the throne of the world. Heights (2005) Heights is the fourth and final book in the Darkest Powers trilogy. The book focuses on Delphine and Anna as they journey through a hellish maze of the city of Kalimpura, which has come under the control of Frederick Douglass. Upon arrival, they discover that they are a failure of the prophecy and that they are not heirs to the throne. They decide to escape the city, although their efforts are continually hampered by the oppressive Frederick Douglass, his army and the inhabitants of Kalimpura. Heights is the first in a series of trilogies. On a Pale Horse (2003) On a Pale Horse is the first book in The Faithful and the Fallen series, written by Elizabeth Haynes and available through Scholastic. The book focuses on a preacher with a gift for prophecy, who, after witnessing the fall of a hero, finds himself on the run from people
