fiberscope, forceps, cutting instruments, biopsy forceps, sutures, and irrigation/suction devices can be inserted. In the case of a biopsy forceps, the forceps is passed through the working channel of the endoscope into a region of the patient in need of a biopsy sample. In this manner the forceps is in close proximity to the tissue requiring a biopsy sample. If a cancerous lesion is present, a biopsy sample can be taken using the biopsy forceps to obtain a tissue sample.

Endoscopes may also be used to clean, debride, or destroy body tissue. Examples of endoscopes which can be used to perform these functions include endoscopic sinus/nasal fistula
